Weather stops plane hunt as China demands

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Bad weather suspended the search today for any remains of a Malaysian jetliner as China demanded information a day after Malaysia's leader said the heartbreaking conclusion was that Flight 370 had crashed in the southern Indian Ocean with no survivors.

Planes and ships have been crisscrossing a remote area of ocean 1,550 miles southwest of Australia, but the search was called off because of waves up to 12 feet, high winds and heavy rain.

The suspension comes after a somber announcement late Monday by Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak saying the plane had crashed in the sea, but which also left unanswered many troubling questions about why the Boeing 777, which was en route to Beijing on March 8 when it disappeared, was so far off-course.

It also unleashed a storm of sorrow and anger among the families of the jet's 239 passengers and crew — two-thirds of them Chinese.

China responded today by demanding that Malaysia turn over the satellite data used to conclude that the jet had gone down in the southern Indian Ocean.

Given that 153 of the passengers aboard Flight 370 were Chinese, the incident was a highly emotional one for Beijing. Family members of the missing passengers have complained bitterly about a lack of reliable information and some say they are not being told the whole truth.

Deputy Foreign Minister Xie Hangsheng told Malaysia's ambassador to Beijing that China wanted to know exactly what led Najib to announce that the plane had been lost, a statement on the ministry's website said.

"We demand the Malaysian side to make clear the specific basis on which they come to this judgment," Xie was quoted as telling Iskandar Bin Sarudin during their meeting late Monday.

There was no immediate response from Malaysia.

The families planned to march on the Malaysian Embassy today, and dozens of police were already outside the embassy compound.

Najib, clad in a black suit, read a brief statement on what he called an unparalleled study of the jet's last-known signals to a satellite. That analysis showed that the missing plane veered "to a remote location, far from any possible landing sites."

"It is therefore with deep sadness and regret that I must inform you that, according to this new data, Flight MH370 ended in the southern Indian Ocean," he said.

He did not directly address the fate of those aboard, but in a separate message sent to some of the relatives of the passengers, Malaysia Airlines said that "we have to assume beyond any reasonable doubt that MH370 has been lost and that none of those on board survived."

The conclusions were based on a more-thorough analysis of the brief signals the plane sent every hour to a satellite belonging to Inmarsat, a British company, even after other communication systems on the jetliner shut down for unknown reasons.

The pings did not include any location information. But Inmarsat and British aviation officials used "a type of analysis never before used in this sort" to zero in on the last direction of its fuel.

In a statement the comparison analysis and transmission of Malaysia Airlines flights to destruction of flight.

Najib gave a statement on where the plane was.

Ukraine pulls troops from Crimea

NOVOOZERNOE, Crimea (AP) — Russia's foreign minister met with his Ukrainian counterpart for the first time on Monday and demanded more autonomy for Ukraine's regions, even as Ukraine under pressure ordered its troops out from Crimea after the Russian seizure of military bases there.

Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov in an unexpected move agreed to the highest level meeting yet between the Russian government and a representative of the new Ukrainian government that Moscow has opposed vociferously over the past month.

The meeting took place on the sidelines of a nuclear security summit in the Hague, Netherlands.

Lavrov told Ukrainian Foreign Minister Andriy Deshchychitsia that Russia continues to want constitutional changes in Ukraine that would give more autonomy to all regions of Ukraine.

Russia is eager to retain its influence in Ukraine's Russian-speaking eastern regions and prevent Ukraine from joining NATO. It has pushed for the new Ukraine to become a loose federation — demands the new Ukrainian government has rejected.

Before the meeting, Deshchychitsia said his government fears a Russian military buildup near Ukraine's border. "The possibility of a military invasion is very high. We are very much worried about this concentration

West seeks to isolate Russia over Ukraine

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Seeking to isolate Russia, the U.S. and Western allies declared Monday they are indefinitely cutting Moscow out of a major international coalition and warned they stand ready to order tougher economic penalties if Vladimir Putin presses further into Ukraine.

The moves came amid a flurry of diplomatic jockeying as the West grappled for ways to punish Russia for its annexation of the Crimean Peninsula and prevent the crisis from escalating.

President Barack Obama and the leaders of Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Canada and Japan met in the Netherlands for an emergency meeting of the Group of Seven. In a joint statement after their 90-minute meeting, the leaders said they were suspending their participation with Russia in the Group of Eight major industrial nations until Moscow "changes course."

The G-7 leaders instead plan to meet this summer in Brussels, symbolically gathering in the headquarters city of the European Union and NATO, two Western organizations that have sought to bolster ties with Ukraine.

"Today, we reaffirm that Russia's actions will have significant consequences," the leaders' statement said. "This clear violation of international law is a serious challenge to the rule of law around the world and should be a concern for all nations."

In an unexpected development, Russia's foreign minister Sergey Lavrov met separately in The Hague with his Ukrainian counterpart, the highest level of contact between the two nations since Russia moved forces into Crimea nearly a month ago. U.S. officials said they welcomed the meeting but challenged Russia to take further steps to de-escalate the conflict.

Lavrov sought to downplay the significance of the West purging Russia from the G-8, describing the economic partnership as an informal club that has been superseded by other international forums.

"If our Western partners believe that such format is no longer needed, let it be so," Lavrov said. "We aren't clinging for that format, and we won't see a big problem if there are no such meetings for a year, or a year-and-a-half."

Russia's actions have sparked one of Europe's deepest political crises in decades and drawn comparisons to the Cold War era's tensions between East and West. Obama and other Western leaders have condemned Russia's movements and ordered economic sanctions on Putin's close associates, though those punishments appear to have done little to change the Russian president's calculus.

Hours before world leaders began meeting in The Hague, Russian forces stormed a Ukrainian military base in Crimea, the third such action in as many fledgling troops the strategic peninsula.

In Western, past a and to late the aid. In the peninsula, the country and referred to Russia's leader.

Late layup ends Tar Heels' run

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — DeAndre Kane drove for the game-winning layup with 1.6 seconds left and No. 3 seed Iowa State beat North Carolina 85-83 on Sunday, advancing to the Sweet 16 for the first time since 2000.

The Cyclones (28-7) head to Madison Square Garden next week to face No. 7 seed Connecticut in the East Regional semifinals.

The Tar Heels (24-10) are gone in the NCAA tournament's opening weekend for the first time in consecutive seasons under coach Roy Williams.

North Carolina's Nate Britt raced the ball up court after Kane's basket, but time expired before he could reach midcourt and call a timeout. Officials huddled for several minutes reviewing clock replays before ruling the game was over.

Kentucky 78, Wichita State 76

ST. LOUIS — It took a program stocked with NBA prospects to finally end Wichita State's perfect run.

Andrew Harrison scored 20 points, twin brother Aaron had 19 and Kentucky survived a potential winning 3-point-er at the buzzer by Fred VanVleet to knock off the undefeated Shockers with a 78-76 victory Sunday in the NCAA tournament.

Julius Randle added 13 points and 10 rebounds, and James Young also had 13 points for the No. 8 seed Wildcats (26-10), who made a series of clutch free throws in the closing minutes to advance to the Sweet 16 in arguably the most captivating game of a thrilling first weekend.

AROUND THE BLUHMINS' TOWN

March Madness picks are easy: pizza and k

Are you ready for March Madness? Yep, it's that time of year again, when the NCAA tournaments send millions of fans into a synchronized frenzy — hence the name March Madness. Actually, what we are watching is the concentrated hype of 68 teams vying for college basketball's biggest prize. Oh, the glory of heart-pounding, last-second, buzzer-beating baskets that result in the euphoria of winning, while the rest will cry in agony and have to go home. There will be tears, sweat, and greatness with a champion at the end of this chaos.

So how is your bracket shaping up? Let's forget about brackets for a moment and move on to rackets. Did you know that there is an increase in vasectomy procedures done during March Madness? It seems that many physicians advertise heavily in February with ads that scream: "Get A Vasectomy, Recupere Watching the NCAA Tournaments & Free Pizza Delivered Daily!" I am not making this up, Dear Readers. It seems that vasectomies are a slam dunk during March Madness! Even the highly esteemed Cleveland Clinic claims that vasectomy procedures increase by 50 percent during the NCAA Tournaments!

So it seems urologists all over the country do a great business in scheduling vasectomies in March and as one doctor in Los Angeles happily claims his appointments go up 30

Did you know that the odds of making a perfect bracket are over 9.2-quintillion-to-one? In fact, the odds are so miserable that if every individual in the world completed a bracket, the odds would be a billion to one against any of them being perfect!

percent during March Madness. Could it be because he runs a special discount ad that says, "If you have four kids and want to make certain that they are the Final Four — call for an appointment and get 40 percent off." Ha! I'd like to call a foul! Ladies, we better demand we get pedicures and a spa day when we have those female procedures.

I asked a physician friend if he thought that this type of advertising was ethical and he laughed and looked at me like I had two heads. "It is a safe procedure; of course it is ethical," he chuckled. Hey, I wasn't talking about the procedure, I was asking about the pizza (and maybe beer) eating, yelling, screaming, high-fiving and general fist-pumping that goes on when you are watching the NCAA Tournament! I mean wouldn't hot tea, an ice bag and watching Downton Abbey be more conducive to healing post-op?

One physician in Cape Cod defended his brilliant advertising of pizza and hoops as simply "value-added marketing." You know, that's like when you go to the dentist and spend $600 and walk away with a little toothbrush and a miniature tube of toothpaste. One time I bought a horse and an old saddle was thrown in for the same price. Oh, and thirty years ago I opened a checking account at a bank that was giving away free toasters if you deposited more than $50. I loved that toaster. Well I guess times have changed!

One man said that having his vasectomy during March Madness was the best week of his life. Stayed in his man cave, controlled the remote, no chores to do, ate junk food and wife brought him beer and Tylenol extra-strength upon request. What a way to watch your brackets get busted. Long live Gonzaga!

Back to brackets and all that, which is a mathematical equation that allows us to overanalyze and obsess over every little stat. Did you know that the odds of making a perfect bracket are over 9.2-quintillion-to-one?

According to Saint Vincent de Paul Thrift Shop Manager Sarah Thomas, her store sees people looking for help as well as employment.

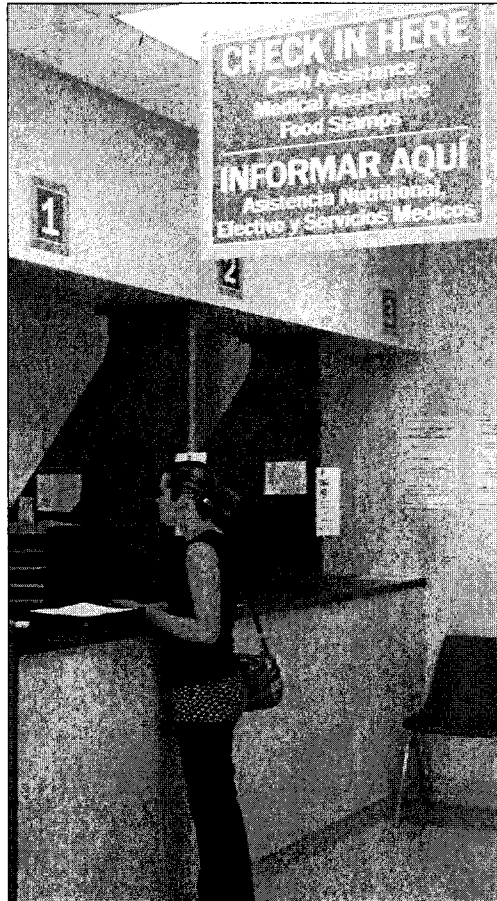

"Our store runs with 95 percent volunteers and only ten employees, but we do get a lot of people looking for work at the store and for assistance, particularly more in the summer," Thomas said.

Published reports indicate that nationwide employment improved in February as employers added 175,000 jobs. But many are still struggling to get back into their field of work and have taken other jobs until something arises.

"I have been looking for a job in a hospital for months," said Sarah Cantrall, Lake Havasu City resident who has had to rely on assistance from the Arizona Department of Economic Security. "I did get employed at Carl's Jr. until I tried to get something in my field." Cantrall said she interviewed for a dietitian aide position at the hospital.

Saint Vincent de Paul in Lake Havasu City assists those in need with clothing, food from the food bank and utility assistance for those who have fallen behind on their bills and or have a loss of income and still find themselves struggling.

"Although unemployment rates are down a bit we still are here to help people with utility assis-

Flagstaff resid 21 days in wild

By ABBIE GRIPMAN
ARIZONA DAILY SUN

FLAGSTAFF — Naked? Yes. Afraid? Not so much.

Flagstaff resident Eva Rupert, a petite 33-year-old tattoo artist, braved 21 days in the wilderness with no food or water to start with and no clothes. The experience was chronicled on a recent episode of the Discovery Channel's "Naked and Afraid" that features experienced survivalists.

Rupert's work in outdoor education drew the attention of casting agents who called and asked if she was interested in appearing in the show. A flurry of phone and Skype calls, then personal interviews and auditions were followed by silence. Months passed before she got another call. Six days later, she was on a plane headed to Madagascar.

To prepare for the trip, Rupert stopped eating junk food to avoid caffeine withdrawals and sugar cravings, spun a hand drill that she uses to build fires in order to build up calluses and sunbathed so she wouldn't burn, she said.

But the real preparation, she said, has been a lifelong process of learning and practicing survival techniques.

"The preparation process isn't something you can put together in a week or a month," she said.

Her wilderness adventure began in October when was driven in a pick-up truck to the desert of Madagascar, soaking up information about the environment on the way.

"Then the truck stops," she said. "The camera guy says, 'OK, it's time,' so you take your clothes off and go meet your partner."

Her survival partner, Jeff Zausch, was a 27-year-old from Pocatello, Idaho.

The nudity was awkward for less than five minutes, said Rupert, who grew up in Connecticut. After that, she and Zausch were too busy surviving to worry about it. In fact, Rupert said the nudity was just another element of exposure, an added challenge. The extreme heat of Madagascar's desert environment was countered with extreme cold at night that had Rupert longing for a blanket.

She said Zausch was a great partner with a strong work ethic, and their only mission was to reach day 21.
